British through and through

There's nothing more British than afternoon tea and when you add a smattering of tradition, a whole lot of heritage and a dusting of modernity, then this wonderful tea service is what you get. Sipping tea from a pretty tea cup and nibbling on a biscuit (no dunking, best behaviour please) in Anthony and Licia's sunfilled orangerie was a wonderful way to pass an hour.

GET THE LOOK

Licia and Anthony may be leaving their stunning home behind, but the pieces they have collected that add personality to their living space are portable and will bring light, love and colour to wherever they settle next. If you like the look, look here...

Shine on

Anthony has a marvellous opportunity to collect some heavenly pieces from the luxury brands he works with; he's made some very smart choices and selected pieces that will last and last, becoming family heirlooms of the seriously covetable variety.

Home is where the art is

Throughout Anthony and Licia's home there are beautiful artworks, collected over time as the right piece was discovered. Such is their commitment to finding exactly what they want that two empty hooks hang lonely above the sofa in their sitting room. This dedication is how art should be chosen; oils, watercolours, sculpture or photography - these are the pieces that travel with you, making every home your own.

Naturally beautiful

William Yeoward was born and raised in Cheshire and has had global success with his fabulous furniture and accessories designs. This stunning table is handmade to order in a variety of timbers from oak and chestnut through to mahogany and walnut. Deep sigh.
